Guiding Principles

Provincial Nominee Program:

Purpose

maintain their current allocation. Once the size of the allocation increase is determined, the qualitative considerations are used to adjust the allocation size if appropriate, with emphasis on supporting effective relationships with PTs through taking into account PTs' requests for changes in allocations, and considering all allocations each PT receives to support regional needs (i.e. through the PNP, Atlantic Immigration Pilot, and Rural and Northern Immigration Pilot).

Atlantic Immigration Program:

Similar to the Provincial Nominee Program, the Atlantic Immigration Program takes multiple quantitative and qualitative factors into consideration in determining the allocation distribution. In its first year (2017), the Council of Atlantic Premiers (CAP) agreed to use a proportion of population model, based on each

Guiding Principles

Quantitative Considerations:

Share of Economic Immigrants: IRCC will consider the overall share of economic immigrants that a PT receives, including through federal programs.

- A primary objective of the Provincial Nominee Program is to distribute the benefits of economic immigration across Canada.

Past Use of Allocations: Identify trends regarding the use of previous allocations.

- As allocations usage varies widely across PTs, this consideration will help maximize allocations and minimize the demand for in-year reallocations and the need for re-distribution of returned spaces by PTs in the fall.

Key Performance Indicators for Regional Immigration:

- Economic independence
- Retention in nominating jurisdiction
- Supporting regional economic development

Alignment of Nominations and PNP Levels Space: IRCC will consider the number of allocations distributed and PNP levels space to support ongoing departmental efforts to achieve admissions and processing time objectives.

Qualitative Considerations:

PT Input: IRCC will consider the strategic priorities shared by PTs

- To support strategic priorities of the PTs, e.g. supporting growth sectors, addressing targeted economic or labour needs, population growth.
- Will consider requests for increases or changes to a PT's allocation, including as part of annual levels consultations.

Stakeholder Input: IRCC will consider the strategic priorities shared by stakeholders

- Consider input and feedback received from stakeholders including industry associations, employers, communities, settlement provider organizations, academia, etc.

Balanced and Equitable Distribution: Consider a balanced and equitable distribution across jurisdictions

- This would largely apply to jurisdictions of similar size or profile.
- Distribute nominations to optimize each jurisdiction's economic and social prosperity, contributing to Canada's overall wellbeing.

Governmental and Departmental Priorities: Allocations to accomplish specific federal, provincial/territorial, or stakeholder-driven priorities

- Consider PT participation in federal initiatives (e.g. Atlantic Immigration Pilot, NOC C initiative and Francophone Immigration).
- Consider objectives and priorities relating to the Multi-Year Levels Plan (i.e., meeting levels targets and processing times standards).
